can use this program to monitor if you are connected to a VPN. Keep in mind though that while this program will show you no matter where you are browsing, the moment you do so, you could be caught and potentially record your browsing activity. It is your own decision if you want to use a VPN service. If you are doing so, then you should also try to remember to open your VPN, as any connection to a VPN still expose your real identity to a potential Internet monitoring service. If you have doubts whether you should use a VPN or not, here are some reasons for you to use a VPN, as the EFF explains. Can this program help me? VPN Connection Indicator can help you in one way only, but if you are too lazy to open a configuration utility, you may be able to use it as a reminder to open your VPN configuration utility, as otherwise, you may just forget it next time. You can use this program to do the following: Check if you are connected to a VPN or not. Check if your connection is safe. List the available VPN services, so you can decide which one to use. If it detects that you are not connected to a VPN or that your connection is not safe, it will notify

you. Conclusion: As mentioned earlier, VPN Connection Indicator is a great app to use, as it is very light on the system and will not consume much memory. It is also very easy to use, as there are no complex settings to worry about and no menu to learn. Moreover, it is absolutely free, allowing you to have full control of your privacy, at the very least, and at the very most, the ability to monitor your Internet connection's safety. The good old-fashioned way Sometimes the best way to solve a problem is indeed to use the traditional method, and that is the case with VPN Connection Indicator. You can either

No UI, no controls, just click and go All you need to do is to click the system tray icon to know whether you are connected to a VPN or not. An app that is as lightweight as it seems VPN Connection Indicator consumes next to no memory at all while running, does not delay system startup nor does it affect your Internet connection speed. So please check back here as I will update it when he has new releases that I think you will like. I think I like the design of his site the best, so I re-design this page that I have listed below. The design I am using now, is similar to his site, yet a little more mobile friendly. I hope you like it too.
