Photoshop has a 'simple' mode that is a great first step for beginners. It has most of the features of 'advanced' mode, but with just enough to get you started. Refer to Chapter 3 for more information about the simple mode. Starting a New Project Photoshop's interface has changed greatly since its early days. It has been designed for the user to be able to perform many tasks all in one place and do so in a tabbed interface. Most of the following sections just touch on the basics of creating a new document in Photoshop, but if you're a beginner, be sure to check out Chapters and to get the in-depth background you need to create a new document and learn how to use the interface and its features. Creating a new document When you open Photoshop, you're greeted by the New Document window. In this section, you can create a new document from scratch or save an existing file into a new document. Most of the time, you won't have to do this, because you can often create a new document from an existing file (see the sections in this chapter later in the chapter for more information). If you aren't creating a new document from scratch or you just want to create a new document that's in a specific size and resolution, you'll want to first select a template in the New Document Window that matches the desired size and resolution. The New Document window is used to create a new document, so this section shows you how to do so. To create a new document from the current working document in Photoshop, just click the New Document button on the new document window or select New from the menu under File⇒New. To open the New Document window, choose Window⇒New. You can then create a new document in a number of different ways: Use a predefined template to create a specific size and resolution or a pixel-based print. Templates vary in design and complexity, but all are based on a standard unit of measurement called the pixel. A pixel is the smallest unit of pixel space in a raster image. Most templates are sized in pixels. When you create a new document, you're asked to select the desired size and resolution, and then the program sizes the document to that resolution. Create a pixel-based print. Pixel-based prints are sized and developed pixel by pixel. They are also based on a standard unit of measurement called the pixel. Use a with the defendant's inherent authority over the keys of his or her own vehicle." Bradley, 491 U.S. at 8. -8- The evidence showed that Woods and his girlfriend had stolen three tractors from the garage of Woods's father. Woods offered the probation officer a plea agreement in which he would be permitted to plead guilty to one count of being a felon in possession of a firearm if he were sentenced to a specific amount of jail time, including forty to fifty days of time served. The district court sentenced Woods to twenty-seven months of imprisonment, followed by three years of supervised release. The district court recognized that Woods had little criminal history and that he was receiving inpatient drug treatment and had a supportive family, but the district court found that the nature of Woods's crimes did not warrant the relatively harsh punishment of a lengthy term of supervised release. Woods argues that the district court did not give sufficient weight to his family ties, employment history, and his positive efforts at rehabilitation. However, the district court was within its discretion to determine that those factors were not so compelling as to override the seriousness of Woods's crimes. See Johnson, 4 F.3d at 874. As for the two prior Colorado felonies, the two Colorado convictions would have been considered "serious violent felonies" under the amended guidelines. Because Woods did not meet the requirements of 18 U.S.C. § 3553(f)(2), we need not decide whether the error in calculating the -9- guidelines range was harmless. See United States v. Marler, No. 96-1063 (10th Cir. Apr. 17, 1997) (

Q: Basic Authentication in ZKMQ using ZK client and c++ Using ZKMQ, I want to send/receive data as basic authentication. My objective is to write a sample program in c++ to demonstrate the basic authentication mechanism in ZKMQ. For sending, I am using the following command: zkcli -m -p 1984 -u admin -p password -p true -s zk://localhost:2181 -c myconnection --reply -b true -b "true" --basicAuth on What I do not understand is how to specify the password in the c++ code. For a similar example (using http basic authentication) in C, I was able to find the following method (in the code provided by zerocross): HttpAuthenticator::HttpAuthenticator() : auth(NULL) { }

In this function, what does `auth=NULL` represent? A: Instead of using `--basicAuth`, you could use `zkshell -p / -u / -p / -c 'zkcli -m -p / -u / -p / -s / -c myconnection -b true -b "true"'`
