If you do have experience with "don't buy $5 pieces of bric-a-brac and call it art," you probably know what I'm talking about. Someone should tell him that apt-get is not a magic wand that is going to drive the drupal or phpbb or whatever else you are using to code... if that's how he thinks it's a good idea, then that's just his loss. Someone should tell him that apt-get is not a magic wand that is going to drive the drupal or phpbb or whatever else you are using to code... if that's how he thinks it's a good idea, then that's just his loss. I used to be on phpBB, and I found that apt-get to be VERY useful for installing the various plug-ins that allowed me to use the software in a manner that I wanted. Its pretty simple. Down load,extract the contents of the file. Put it on ur desktop. Run Setup.exe or whatever launcher the application uses. Then click I want to install And voila ur done. Took me 20 minutes max. Its pretty simple. Down load,extract the contents of the file. Put it on ur desktop. Run Setup.exe or whatever launcher the application uses. Then click I want to install And voila ur done. Took me 20 minutes max. This may be an important pointer for a lot of people. You can use a program such as 7-zip or WinRAR to extract all the files you are going to use on the new Ubuntu machine. Then you simply transfer them to a USB flashdrive (or a CD/DVD).Send this page to someone via email In an effort to discourage idle teens from drinking and driving, the car manufacturer Ferrari launched a new campaign on Facebook early Friday morning in support of "Do Don't Drive" day.
