If you are a suspicious newbie, you need to be persistent with your endeavors, as Windows is known for staying one step ahead of you. Therefore, as you start to get more and more acquainted with the operating system, you may find yourself in situations when you want to learn more about different registry keys and how to modify the default settings on your system. As you follow this path, it's completely understandable that you may start to feel overwhelmed by the amount of information available on the web. Therefore, you should be grateful for the existence of this user-friendly tool that aims to help you whenever you're stuck for an answer. That's where RegEdit (Registry Editing) comes in. This software was developed to serve a single purpose, and it's pretty evident from the application's name that its makers clearly stated this intent. RegEdit is designed to be the central point of reference when you're looking for information about the registry and trying to learn more about the way Windows stores all the necessary information about all of the software, drivers and hardware that your computer is equipped with. The software's main window displays a large list of all the files that are found in Windows' registry, while the toolbar at the bottom of the window sports the main tools for working with the registry. RegEdit is made up of two main parts: - An open window that displays the values in the registry (all the information about the registry) - A large list with all the files that are found in Windows' registry (all the information about the files) The registry window is very wide, and you can drag the window to enlarge it or reduce it to fit your screen. You can then sort the registry information by clicking on the header of any of the listed values. You can expand or collapse the registry window by clicking on the button at the top right corner of the window. The file list window opens automatically when you open the main window, and you can filter it using the View menu: - Open - Quickly open a specific file in the list. - Encrypt - Displays all the available encryption algorithms for files and registry keys. - Network - Lists all the file shares that are currently available. - Extension - Lists all the files that have the specified extension. - Computer - Lists all the computers that are found in the registry. - User - Lists all the files that belong to a specific user.
