Lenders started charging higher interest rates in September 2017. Today, more than three million loan applications have been processed and about 2 million loans closed. But, the application figures continue to go up, showing how demand for refinancing remains high. According to the Mortgage Bankers Association's Weekly Mortgage Applications Survey for week of June 13, the number of refinance applications increased by 16% over the week ended June 6. The refinance application volume is running about six times higher than it was at the same time last year. Refinancing applications continue to be helped along by low mortgage rates. The average rate on the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage climbed to 4.52% this week, up from 4.40% last week. The rate rose by 0.08 percentage point. This puts the average rate on the 30-year fixed-rate mortgage within reach of the record low set this year, according to Bankrate.com's Weekly Mortgage Rate Economic Calendar. The average rate on the 15-year fixed-rate mortgage increased by 0.15 percentage point to 3.41% this week. This means that the average rate on the 15-year fixed-rate

How can i make it print b/k where k is the variable? #!/bin/bash old_dir=`pwd` cd $old_dir k=5 A: Simple pathname expansion: k=5 cd `dirname $old_dir`/$k Or simply: k=5 cd `readlink -f "$old_dir"`/$k Also, I recommend that you read about the differences between $old_dir and "$old_dir" (and "..."), and try to avoid typing out the `...`; besides being less readable, they can cause subtle problems. Q: Command line arguments in python How would I detect when there are no command line arguments? There is a program I am writing that is going to be using multiple processes as a means of splitting and processing jobs, and I need to put some extra precautions in to make sure that there are no command line arguments,
