a national woman suffrage convention in new york city in 1869 passed a resolution stating: we believe that the time has arrived when woman should be given an equal voice with man in every public movement, and in politics the ballot is hers by the laws of the land. the convention adopted a platform of principles on which they could stand, which included a statement of their political and civil equality with men. the platform also included a resolution in support of woman suffrage and cited the fifteenth amendment as the only legal justification for such a right. the platform asserted that women were not inferior to men and maintained that women were entitled to equal protection of the laws. the awsa went on to fight for women's rights, with its legislative arm, the national woman suffrage association (nwsa), to pass a constitutional amendment in 1878. the amendment proposed that women be given the right to vote in federal elections, a right that had been granted to all american citizens by the 13th amendment. the amendment was defeated, however, because it lacked the necessary two-thirds majority in both houses of congress. in the meantime, the awsa passed resolutions in favor of woman suffrage in local elections. the national woman suffrage association (nwsa) was organized on december 10, 1881, and had a membership of 7,000 by 1883. the majority of the membership, however, was conservative, and the organization did not champion equality for women. it fought for a constitutional amendment granting suffrage to women in federal elections, and finally succeeded in getting a congressional resolution to this effect passed in 1887. the nwsa moved its headquarters to washington, d.c., in 1888, where it met regularly in the senate and house. it also organized a formal lobby to pass a national woman suffrage bill. in 1893, the nwsa held its first convention in atlanta, georgia, where it adopted a platform in support of women's rights. it also resolved to work for suffrage at the state level. by the early 1900s, the nwsa was a national organization with more than 30,000 members.
