The next step is to modify the boot partitions of the mobile. There is one partition for booting the mobile and another for the storage system. You can boot from a custom recovery when you press the volume key + power button at the same time. A recovery menu will appear on the screen and then you will be able to install custom firmware. Boot into recovery mode and select "wipe data/factory reset" and then "wipe cache partition" followed by "wipe dalvik cache" to delete all the traces of the original firmware. You can install the Android Samsung Galaxy A9 2018 SM-A920F Stock Rom from your SD card and then install it without having to worry about formatting the mobile. You can follow the guide to install a custom recovery and on top of that, you can use this guide to install the Android stock ROM on Samsung Galaxy A9 (2018) SM-A920F. Try to follow it carefully and guide given. If you encounter any problem or cannot understand, just contact me and i'll be glad to help you. At the end of this, you will get a rooted mobile which is a copy of the original stock firmware you followed from the Samsung Firmware Science website. The main benefit of this, is you will get your phone fast and the rooting process will not interrupt your mobile usage. I hope the guide was useful to you. If you're looking for the actual firmware you need to flash, it can sometimes be difficult to locate online. For any older Samsung device, the best place to look is typically in the corresponding XDA forum. Many users post stock and beta firmware in these forums. If you are lucky enough to have a recent Samsung flagship, you can download the desired firmware from the Samsung Firmware Science website. 5ec8ef588b
